Ideally this should be under 0.1. Scores over 0.25 are considered a poor user experience. HIGH We didn't detect any lazy loaded resources. Lazy loading *may* help speed up your site (not always though) In this test we're probing for lazy load support. Lazy loading defers the load of files that sit outside the initial viewable area on your website or elements that are "below the fold". This speeds up the initial load of your website as there are less files to load. As the visitor scrolls down the page files and other resources are loaded as the come into view. This optimization is particularly useful on image heavy sites, pages that are really long with a long of images and pages with a lot of embedded content like several Youtube videos. It's really important that if you do decide to lazy load elements on your page you review how the page reacts on desktop, tablet and mobile to ensure lazy loading doesn't break the render of your site of make it feel weird. Your Load Time (aka Onload time or document complete) is over 5 which probably means the user will experience some slowness. Hmm...your page is more than 3mb in size (although less than 5mb). It's on the large side which is going to slow you down.

Two Easy Ways To Reduce Page Size

Two simple ways to reduce the file size are to compress images with Nextgen image compression (we do probe for this, click the Nextgen image section for details on how to do this) and also use Lazy Loading to defer the load of images, videos and iFrames.

With lazy loading in place, images and files that sit outside the viewable area or "above the fold" are not loaded until the visitor scrolls down to that section of the page. This helps make the initial load of the page much lighter and faster.

Troubleshooting Excessively Large Page Sizes

Excessively large pages would be 5mb, 10mb or larger. Here you really need to first identify the root cause. Scroll down to the bottom of the report and it'll give you a breakdown of file sizes by type - it's an easy way to identify whether large images are your problem or something else.

The most common causes of problems here are excessively large images, for example images that are say 5000x3000 pixel resolution where the section they sit in on your site is 500x300 pixels, too many embeds on a page like several Youtube embeds or very heavy video backgrounds.

Hmm you have some big problems here. You have somewhere between 200-300 files loading on this page.

This usually happens when the page has too many Youtube, Vimeo, Soundcloud or third party embeds or where you're using an Ad Network or third party monetization and the provider is either out of control or something is broken.

Lazy loading may help here but it's worth reviewing the waterfall view below in more detail to determine what the root cause is here. If you scroll down to the bottom of the page you'll see a breakdown of the site content by file sizes, quantity and hostnames.

Other issues we see are Facebook or Twitter widgets that are displaying the full feed in the widget. This is like loading an entirely separate website inside yours and is horrible for speed - ideally these widgets should be removed.

Hmm, you've got 50-100 JS files loading which is too many and is going to work the visitors browser or device really hard. You need to check to make sure they're all required.

*Sometimes* you can improve how fast your site feels by moving your Javascript from the header of your site to the footer which causes it to load later in the loading and render process.

Defering or loading Javascript asynchronously can also help minimize it's impact.

A simple action step you can take is to analyze the waterfall view below and identify any software or tools you're not actively using and remove those from the website - often marketing and analytics tools were installed years ago and are no longer in use.

If you're using WordPress and injecting code using plugins often you can squeeze a little more speed out of your site by implementing Google Tag Manager and using that to fire third party scripts and code.

Your Document Complete Time was over 5 seconds, the site will feel slow to visitors and needs some work.

Your First Contentful Paint (FCP) time is 3+ seconds. Your visitors will perceive your site to be slow.

The FCP time is the start of your site render, it's when the user sees something happening. With an FCP time of over 3 seconds your users are going to perceive your site as slow.

FCP time encompasses a number of elements and there are many ways to improve this metric including reducing DNS lookup time, reducing TTFB, minimizing or eliminating render blocking CSS and Javascript as well as reducing the weight or filesize of elements "above the fold" on a page by doing things like using Lazy Loading and Nextgen Image Optimization.

In most cases your FCP time should be lower than the Fully Loaded Time, if it's not usually the culprit is excessive amounts of javascript causing high CPU usage.

It looks like you have over 200 requests from third party sites and servers, that's usually not good (***unless they're from your own CDN)

You'll see the exact number under the "Number of requests for resources not on tested domain" section.

Most often this means you're running ads or ad monetization on your site.

Ads can significantly slow down your page load times and can definitely cause issues with site speed.

Two of the more popular ad networks, Adthrive and MediaVine have Pagespeed friendly features which reduce the impact of ads on your load time. These features need to be enabled.

AdThrive

Adthrive call this feature "Deferred Ad Loading", if you scroll down to the bottom of this article on their website you'll see more details about it. As of the time of writing you'll need to reach out to them to have them manually enable this.

MediaVine

MediaVine have a setting called "Optimize Ads for Mobile Pagespeed" that can be enabled in their dashboard. More info here on their website.

Ezoic

Ugh Ezoic!

Ezoic are one of the worst offenders when it comes to slowing down your site. They have an obscure configuration that usually requires you to route traffic through their servers which then causes huge TTFB times and also really bloated HTML.

They say this doesn't hurt site speed or SEO but it does and is bad. If you're not particularly attached to Ezoic we recommend switching to MediaVine or AdThrive - the payouts will likely be similar without such a heavy impact on speed.

An easy way to test the impact your ad network is having on your site speed is to temporarily disable it!

Particularly with a provider like Ezoic, you'll see load times return to looking normal or even quite fast.

Your LCP is over 4 seconds, that's generally considered slow and a poor user experience.

LCP or Largest Contentful Paint, is a core web vitals metric that represents the time needed for the biggest part of the webpage (an image, video, etc.) to appear in the visitor's browser. It's one of the most important factors when it comes to your site's speed because it's when the visitor perceives the page as loaded.

To make Google happy, your largest contentful paint timing should sit under 2.5 seconds, so the largest content on the page should be visible and ready for interaction in no longer than 2.5 seconds. To pass Google's Core Web Vitals Test for LCP timing, 75%+ of your visitors should get an LCP time of under 2.5 seconds.

First Input Delay (FID) measures interactivity or how quickly the site responds to the first user input. Good is under 100ms, 100ms-300ms needs improvement and 300ms+ is not great.

Potential problem, your Fully Loaded Time was over 10 seconds. That's high. You should review the waterfall view to ensure that it's just 3rd party files making it high and not the core of the site - if the Document Complete time is low then this is usually fine.

Ideally we want our speed timings looking something like this:

- -TTFB 0.1-0.2 seconds (this is where is should be in the country where the site is hosted, 0.2-0.5 internationally)
- -FCP at or under 1 second
- -LCP under 4 seconds but ideally as close to the LCP as possible, generally within 1 second of the LCP is fast
- -load time 1.5-2.5
- -fully loaded time can vary a lot depending on the third party code being used. Generally we'd expect to see it 1-2 second higher than the load time but this largely depends on the type of site, eg with a Woocommerce site this could easily be 3-5 seconds higher depending on the marketing code in use

Usually a higher fully loaded time is due to third party files loading - like analytics tools, marketing code and so forth. It's worth reviewing the waterfall view below and the breakdown of file types beneath that to see if there's an obvious areas for improvement.

When you look at the waterfall view, the longer or fatter the line the slower that file is loading. You ideally want to eliminate or fix any files that are taking excessively long to load.

It's worth running the test a few times to get an average and also running from multiple locations. Occasionally a location will run fast or slow or the route may be congested so the test result may not be 100% accurate.

Don't take this recommendation on face value, you really REALLY need to investigate and review the waterfall breakdown further below to understand how the site speed is really doing.

Almost all types of sites will benefit from caching. Caching prebuilds each page so when a visitor arrives that the site all the code execution, database lookups and other work are already done and the HTML file is ready to go.

WARNING

Oooh, looks like you're using Shopify - here's a few nuggets for you to dig into!

The resource for you to check out:

The Ultimate Guide to SEO for Ecommerce - this is a HUGE resource on big and small tweaks you can make to your Shopify site to rank higher AND boost your conversion rate.

We detected a request to a HTTP (not HTTPS) resource, are you sure you tested the right URL? HTTPS is really important on the modern web for speed, security and SEO.

When testing your site make sure you're using HTTPS in front of the web address if the site is running in HTTPS encrypted mode. If you don't do this your speed test won't be accurate as the load time will include the time it takes to redirect from HTTP://yoursite.com to HTTPS://yoursite.com

If you did test the correct URL an easy way to find the offending file(s) is to do a CTRL+F (find) in your browser and search for HTTP:// on this page. If the file or resource has OCSP in it and looks a little odd that's OK, it's part of your SSL certificate verification. If it's something else then that file or resource needs to be fixed.

Your site should be running in HTTPS mode as it's important for speed, SEO and user security, here's a brief explanation:

Speed

In order to use the newer, faster HTTP2 protocol (and the upcoming HTTP3 protocol) your site needs to be running in HTTPS mode. HTTP2 is significantly faster than the HTTP 1.1 protocol it superceded. Essentially it speeds up how quickly files are downloaded or delivered to visitors.

SEO

Google have publicly stated that HTTPS support is a part of their ranking algorithm. It's not a huge part BUT when it comes to SEO and Google Rankings, every little bit helps right? Who doesn't like free traffic!

Security and Privacy

With HTTPS in place data transferred between your visitors and website is encrypted and can't be snooped on (in 99.99999% of cases). If you're doing any sort of ecommerce or transactions at all including even simple things like having user's submit data through a contact form, then encryption is critically important.

Most modern web browsers will now show a big UNSECURE or similar message to visitors when they visit unencrypted sites and probably will increasingly warn users about this so important you're running HTTPS so visitors aren't scared off.

Search Engine Results Page (SERP) Preview & Basic SEO Analytics

This SERP analysis feature will give you basic recommendations around SEO on some fundamental SEO fields, the title tag of your page, your meta description and your open graph image.

These SEO fields determine how the website appears *most* of the time (sometimes Google will change it) in the search results. The title tag also tells Google what the page is about so can heavily influence what keywords or search terms your page ranks for and how high.

The meta description doesn't influence rankings directly BUT does tell searchers on Google what your page is about and when well written, will determine what percentage of people who see your page in the search results will click through to your website. This percentage or metric is known as Click Through Rate (CTR).

We added this basic analysis field as many people using our speed test tool are ultimately chasing better search engine rankings and more website visitors. We see again and again these SEO fields being used poorly or not at all which is frustrating to see as simply having these fields populated (even without op or fine tuning them) can make a big difference to your Google Rankings and SEO traffic.

Open Graph Preview Section

Below you'll see a preview of the Open Graph Image and Tags if you have them setup on the site. OG tags are what is displayed when this page is shared on social networks and chat tools. A custom open graph image on each page, particularly your homepage, can dramatically improve CTR (click through rate). If nothing shows below you either don't have these tags or our tool couldn't properly detect them.

INFORMATIONAL

Your title tag length looks OK with 35-100 characters. Using the full length of the field will usually help improve your CTR (click through rate) so it might be worth reviewing the title tag to see if there's more juice you can squeeze out of it!

GOOD

Great - looks like most of the words are capitalized (words starting with capitals) in your title tag or meta description. Generally speaking capitalizing the start of each word in your title tag and meta description will help CTR.

You have one word in ALL CAPS in your meta description - GREAT! In many cases ALL CAPS in a title tag can improve CTR. You can usually get away with 2 words in ALL CAPS if it's appropriate - words like FAST, FREE, INSURED, GUARANTEED are good candidates for ALL CAPS.

OTHER

Your meta description looks too long and is probably getting cutoff.

You title doesn't have any numbers. Sometimes adding numbers to the title tag can boost CTR and very often for businesses that want phone calls, adding the phone number to the title tag can help a great deal with increasing phone calls AND CTR.
